Course Description

This course examines the problems that emerge when post-secondary education is provided on a mass scale. These problems include mission drifts to corporate and consumer models, and the competing interests of stakeholders that produce dysfunctional systems normalizing academic disengagement and grade inflation, both of which put undue stress on students and professors. Alternatives to these degraded mass systems are examined and solutions to problems facing Canada’s university system are discussed. This course will be of special interest to those planning careers in, or associated with, education. This course is reading intensive and designed for serious, committed students who are willing to prepare for, attend, and participate in, all classes. There is no term paper, which students usually cram into the last few days before the deadline; instead, I expect students to invest significant amounts of time each week to the readings in preparation for discussions of them in class.

Prerequisite(s):
Third or fourth year standing in any module in the Department of Sociology.

Unless you have either the requisites for this course or written special permission from your Dean to enroll in it, you may be removed from this course and it will be deleted from your record. The decision may not appealed. You will receive no adjustment to your fees in the event that you are dropped from a course for failing to have the necessary prerequisites.

Antirequisite(s)
None

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this course students will be able to:

* distinguish between forms of education that constitute liberal arts as opposed to pseudo-vocational substitutes for a liberal education
* understand the history of higher education and the mission drifts that are taking place toward pseudo-vocationalism

* identify the interests and conflicts among the various stakeholders pulling and pushing the mass-educational system

* appreciate the differences among élite, mass, and universal educational systems

* have an in-depth comprehension of the origins and consequences of academic disengagement, at the individual and institutional levels

* identify the stresses experienced by students and faculty and how these are related to the mission drifts and pressures on the system by various stakeholders

* know the pedagogical uses of new technologies, and the reasons for the hype about them

* understand international variations in higher education as well as how students are prepared at the secondary level and offered alternatives to academic tracks

* generate potential solutions to the problems faced by mass systems in various societies, especially those governed by neoliberal ideologies

Required Text(s)

Selected chapters from Côté, J. E. & Furlong, A. (editors). Routledge Handbook of the Sociology of Higher Education. Routledge, 2016. (HSHE) (these chapters are available for free use as an online resource via Weldon library —it is not necessary to purchase this text)

Various PDFs of readings available on the course OWL site.

Method of Evaluation

Attendance is required and constitutes 10% of the grade. Everyone is given a 10% credit to begin the year and keeps it with perfect attendance, but loses 3% for each class missed without academic accommodation. Two non-cumulative in-class midterm exams and a final take-home exam will determine 90% of the course grade. The exams will be based on lecture material, class discussions, and assigned readings. The questions will be drawn roughly 50% from classes and 50% from readings, with some overlap.
The in-class midterm exams will combine multiple-choice and short-answer formats. The take-home essay exam covers material from the entire course and will require answering two of three questions in approximately 500 words each.

Evaluation Breakdown

Tests/Exam: 90%

The first midterm test is worth 30% and the second test is worth 30%. A take-home essay exam is worth 30%.

Engagement—is expected:

Students are expected to read in preparation for lectures as specified in the lecture outline. Readings will be explained in class to some extent, but there will also be extensive and in-depth class discussions of material in the readings based on the assumption that students have prepared for class. Accordingly, the more students prepare for class by reading the relevant material in advance, the higher the quality of classes and the more everyone will benefit personally and intellectually from the course. The motivation of all students in the class to engage in deep learning is essential to making this a rewarding experience for everyone.

To help in preparation and note taking, by 4:00 PM on the day before each weekly class, the PowerPoint slides for that class will be posted on the course OWL site, both in PPT and PDF. You should print out a copy of one of these and bring it to class. The PDF version will have three slides per page with lined spaces on which to make crib notes.

Classes will involve a Socratic Method, an active learning technique whereby I will summarize the readings somewhat but will mainly ask questions about key aspects of the readings and their implications, with the class following the logic of various assumptions and conclusions as part of critical thinking exercises. It is thus essential that students prepare for class by reading in advance and contemplating the significance and implications of the content of the readings. These questions will constitute the basis of the questions asked on the exams.

Engagement is defined in terms of motivation and active learning: preparing for class by doing—and thinking about—the assigned readings in advance of class each week, and making insightful contributions to class based on the readings. To be fully engaged, students should expect to spend six hours per week preparing for classes in these ways, plus the additional hours in weekly class attendance. Those who feel shy about speaking up in class can email me their questions/comments before or after classes, and I will read them to the class if they are appropriate and there is time, or I will respond to them by email and circulate the emails to the entire class if I think others will benefit.

“80 percent of life is showing up.” (Woody Allen): Engagement also means attending all classes on time and giving them your full attention. It is up to each student to make their presence known in the class, but I will provide optional name “tent cards” for those who want to use one so that I and other students in the class can get to know their name.

“Civility costs nothing, and buys everything.” (Mary Wortley Montagu): It should go without saying that cell phones should be turned off and put off the desk, and that no texting should be done during class. Classroom civility is expected and incidents of incivility will result in penalties in this component of the grade (e.g., 1% per incident of your attendance grade). Texting in class and using laptops inappropriately (e.g., checking social media or playing games) are the two most common forms of incivility in contemporary classrooms. They are very distracting to professors who are trying to reach/teach everyone in the class, but also to neighbouring students who are trying to concentrate on what is being said/done in class.

Important Policies

Policies on Examinations

Make-up exams are not routine in this course. Moreover, I will not agree to provide make-ups so students can go on family holidays, attend weddings or birthday parties, go to other people’s graduations, or otherwise pursue various personal/hedonistic activities. If accommodations for a make-up are granted by the Dean’s office, it will be essay format.

Computer-marked multiple-choice tests and/or exams may be subject to submission for similarity review by software that will check for unusual coincidences in answer patterns that may indicate cheating.

No electronic devices will be allowed during tests and examinations.

A Note on Plagiarism:

Students must write their assignments in their own words. Whenever students take an idea from another author, they must acknowledge their debt both by using quotation marks where appropriate and by proper referencing such as footnotes or citations. Plagiarism is a major scholastic offence (the Scholastic Offence Policy can be viewed in the Western Academic Calendar).

Plagiarism Checking:

All required papers may be subject to submission for textual similarity review to the commercial plagiarism detection software under license to the University for detection of plagiarism. All papers submitted for such checking will be included as source documents in the reference database for the purpose of detecting plagiarism of papers subsequently submitted to the system. Use of the service is subject to the licensing agreement, currently between The University of Western Ontario and Turnitin.com (www.turnitin.com).

Policy on Accommodation for Medical Illness

Western’s policy on Accommodation for Medical Illness can be found at http://counselling.ssc.uwo.ca/procedures/medical_accommodation.html. Students must see the Academic Counsellor and submit all required documentation in order to be approved for certain accommodation.
Accessibility Options:
Please contact the course instructor if you require material in an alternate format or if you require any other arrangements to make this course more accessible to you. You may also wish to contact Services for Students with Disabilities (SSD) at 661-2111 x 82147 for any specific question regarding an accommodation. Information regarding accommodation of exams is available on the Registrar’s website:
