The annual Sociology Graduate Student Conference is intended to afford graduate students the opportunity to hone their presentation skills and showcase their work to the department. It is also meant to afford graduate students and faculty the opportunity to learn what others in the department are doing. Submissions each year may include empirical contributions, theoretical and conceptual papers, work from MA or PhD projects, course papers, other research or theoretical/conceptual work with which the student is involved, and works in progress.

The Sociology Graduate Student Conference will be conducted in a friendly and open manner. We ask that all participants, session chairs, and attendees respect this process.
We would like to thank all of the people who helped make the 12th annual Sociology Graduate Student Conference a success.
